The voice of horses for almost a century

Campaigning sits at the heart of our UK and international work, providing a hugely cost effective way of positively impacting the lives of thousands or even millions of horses. Our whole approach reflects the legacy of our founder Ada Cole, who pioneered a caring and practical attitude to horse welfare.

Thanks to Ada Cole's commitment we achieved our first campaigning victory in 1937 providing protection for British horses being exported for slaughter – this legislation is still in place today. We continue to build upon the charity's impressive campaigning heritage and since 1927 have influenced over 50 pieces of legislation which directly and positively impact the welfare of horses in the UK and across Europe. We campaign for horses that are vulnerable to exploitation, are lacking suitable legislative provision or are exposed to cruel practices. Our aim has always been to help the greatest possible number of horses by changing attitudes, policy and practice.

You can help us.

Transport

An end to long-distance transportation of horses across Europe for slaughter

Tens of thousands of horses every year suffer as they are transported for thousands of miles across Europe for slaughter. We want this to be replaced with a carcase-only trade.

Responsible ownership

Responsible ownership of all horses

Horses across the EU remain vulnerable to neglect and ignorance of basic horse care. We want to reduce welfare problems through promoting responsible ownership, responsible breeding and responsible end-of-life decisions.

Equine ID

A robust equine identification system

The lack of a robust identification system leaves horses vulnerable to abandonment and mistreatment and would hamper the response to a disease outbreak. We want a strong system that links every horse to a responsible person.

What We Are Campaigning For

Disease

Protection from disease

Disease is a welfare issue. We work to reduce the threat of disease by chairing the UK's Equine Disease Coalition, lobbying for the UK's disease legislation to stay strong and funding research into disease. We also provide information for owners on how they can protect their horses.

Enforcement at ports

Checks on horses entering and leaving the UK

A lack of basic enforcement at our ports is leaving horses vulnerable to illegal trafficking by unscrupulous people. We want to see effective enforcement of the laws meant to protect the most vulnerable horses.

Welfare at slaughter

The highest possible welfare standards at slaughter

Humane slaughter is an important end-of-life route – but standards must be high. We want to see every horse treated with the respect it deserves from birth to death and the highest possible welfare standards whenever horses are slaughtered.
